

Expert guidance on education for girls

As the year draws to a close we hope you're enjoying the end of term festivities and looking forward to a well-deserved break!

Season's Greetings and best wishes for the new year from everyone at MyDaughter.co.uk...

What's new on MyDaughter?

The holidays can be a perfect opportunity for you and your family to take some time out, relax and lose yourselves in a good book. To help you along, we've selected a range of recently published books for all ages which may offer some inspiration for last minute gift ideas: Recommended reads—books for the festive season. And when it comes to books this Christmas, will they be on paper or electronic? Are you a Kindle convert yet? Read one teacher's experience of how his Kindle helps and inspires his class to read more in I love my Kindle, and my class does too...

It may seem like no time at all since your daughter started her senior school, but already she may be starting to think about her subject options for GCSEs. As a parent, how can you help her achieve the right balance of subjects, and make those tough decisions, particularly when she may not yet have a clear idea of what she wants to be? Find out more in the latest of our popular Heads' Tips articles—Heads' Tips—GCSE choices.

On the MyDaughter blog, our panel have been giving us their views on a variety of topics; the perceived horrors of homework in Help—I've got homework!; the importance of the Arts in schools - Don't strip the curriculum of subjects that matter...; and the need to equip our children with advice on relationships and emotional dilemmas in their SRE courses—There's more to relationships than body parts...

If you've got an opinion on an article or blog post, or perhaps a recommendation for a festive book why not add a comment after any article on the site? We'd love to hear from you!

School community trading online is booming and www.schoolstrader.com is the place to start. Schoolstrader has a vibrant independent section covering most independent schools across the UK.
